<sup>24</sup> He was a warden in the Episcopal church at Gardiner's Creek Parish of Simonds near St Johns, Canada. He left 7 daughters 3 sons 45 grandchildren and 5 great grandchildren. His death was reported in the Daily Telegraph St John 13th January 1885. He is related to William Dealy who ran the Dealy brigs from Bantry to St Johns in the 1830s and 40s. This was brought to my attention by Peter Murphy a Professor of History at the University of New Brunswick. His family origins include Evans Shannons from Brahalish and he has undertaken extensive research into this genealogy.

Thomas, son of Francis and Elizabeth Cole, reported in the 1891 census in Ontario that his father was born East India. This would have been ca1750 when the East India Company was responsible for the administration of India and employed many civilian and military personnel from the British Isles. Their role decreased shortly after 1750. I have seen similar notations for other individuals of the same generation (from Vic Johnson in Canada) jvj@thejohnsonclan.ca

<sup>40</sup> Eagle and Cork County Advertiser 24th April 1898 reported on the death of Mrs. Morris, Durrus the last in the line of the Evansons; she was relict of William Morris of Murreagh, late of Castle Salem. Rosscarbery. She was the last direct line of the Evansons, the eldest daughter of Richard Tonson Evanson of Ard Geena and Friendly Cove. The paper says the Evansons were prominent in the army and came in the reign of Elizabeth (this may be incorrect, they were probably Cromwelians) and were related to the Baldwins, Danketts, Morris. She was the sister of Henry Beamish, Muchruse, Clonakilty, Richard deceased Australia, Nathaniel deceased Ardgeena, Mrs John French, Lodge, Muckruse, Mrs Michael Morris deceased USA. At her funeral was R.T.Evanson her only surviving son, Eldon Potter, grandson (his son is buried in Durrus) Rev T.Parker Edwards, Blessington brother in law, FitzWillaim Morris do, FPE Potter do (editor Skibbereen Eagle). There is a surviving Evanson Mrs Olive Williams living in Cork. Her father was one of three brothers born on a farm near Barley Cove c 1900; her father married into Ballinhassig and her uncles went to the US one becoming a Minister both lived to a great age.

<sup>53</sup> Bill Ward Dromreagh now has the farm which Bill's father bought from James c 1920. Bill heard that James's first wife died and the three stillborn children were buried in a lacha field near the original farmhouse. There was a servant girl Johana Carthy who John Jagoe wished to marry but the priest was against it. He built a small house for her and her child. The Catholic Church register suggest that they married and had two children. In the 1911 Census she is Mrs Jago. Frank is buried died single in the Catholic churchyard. He is Catholic in 1901 census and Church of Ireland 1911, according to the Ward family he may have gone to Church of Ireland and Methodist ceremonies each Sunday.

<sup>78</sup> There is an interesting piece of history in Rochester connected to Co. Cork. "The community designated as Cork was in the section comprising Ontario, Davis, Kirk (Woodward) and North streets. The community was settled in the early 1840s and was composed of Protestant Irish immigrants from County Cork, Ireland. For years they were known as Corkonians and later as the "ninety-nine cousins", it being claimed that the little colony bragged of 99 voters, unconditional Republicans. The families comprising the section were the Attridges, Bakers, Dukelows, Gays, Gosnells, Skuses, Swantons and Whitleys. James Baker, a political leader of the clan, a deacon of the North Street Methodist Church, a teetotaler, was the excise commissioner, in charge of granting licenses to the saloons of the city, there being one in the rear of many grocery establishments. In the 1880s and 1890s, when the detective force of the city consisted of but a small fraction of the present force, the "cousins" were represented by four: Baker, Dukelow, Skuse and Swanton." Another article about the 99 Cousins also stated that the Shannon and Killip families were part of this family compact, and that they were a powerful force in local politics, with representatives in city government from the mayor's chair down to the street cleaning department, and many on the police force.

<sup>79</sup> It is assumed the Coomkeen farm was divided sometime c1870 between brothers William and James. Jim Dukelow in 2008 said that it was believed that when the Dukelows moved in first c1830 the area was all furze and bracken and very rough. When Madge and her husband died the property passed to his nephew Sonny Pyburn Dunbeacon and then to his son John who has built a house and farms the land.
